The challenge: Finding skilled resources

1. Talent Acquisition

Sourcing resources with the right skill sets is a time-consuming and costly process.

2. Training and Development

Bringing new team members up to speed and ensuring they meet your project requirements can be a significant investment.

3. Project Deadlines

Meeting project deadlines becomes challenging, in a growing and ever changing market.

4. Managing Costs

High salaries and benefits packages can put a strain on your budget, not to mention recruitment costs.

Strong Partnerships

We focus on building relationships with clients, delivering exceptional service and support.

Don't just take our word for it.

"Quality designs are consistently delivered, and the level of knowledge, particularly in Revit drafting and the creation of the associated labour-intensive library setup, is really pushing us forward with 3D design. Their assistance and dialogue have helped our in-house design team develop their Revit skills too.

Businesses like ours can be hesitant to outsource a step as crucial as design, especially while protecting the ethics of our brand regarding responsible resourcing and labour recruitment. However, working with MiTek quickly eased our fears and increased our trust.

We were able to build a good rapport with the workforce operatives directly, recognising their appreciation for our investment in their personal development. We also established that they were well rewarded and appreciated by their employer, which gave us greater confidence in them as a business partner. The quality and speed of output have been exceptional, even without prior knowledge of each other's work. We're now able to deliver our products with tight programming and regulatory constraints, confident that the information will be delivered accurately for customers, maintaining productivity, and satisfying all our obligations. I can't recommend the team highly enough."
